The Scavenger Hunt

"My help comes from God, the maker of heaven and earth." Psalm 121:1

Dear Ones,

Many of us, having a bit of extra time on our hands, are taking some time just to think. Luke compiled some of his thoughts and sent them to his family, inviting a chuckle, but also, perhaps, a moment of insight. He has kindly given me permission to share them with the whole community. You might want a bible handy. This is a bit of a scavenger hunt!

I have discovered answers to several universal questions.

- 1) With whom would I want to be stranded on a desert island?
Through no fault of her own, Sandra Bullock has fallen from the top of the list. Spending so much time together has proven to me, that having a patient, long suffering and forgiving spouse is better than winning the lottery. (1 Corinthians 13:4,5)
- 2) Money is a lot like toilet paper. You can hoard both, and feel as though you are never done. But, if you run out of either, guess what you get on your hands. (Proverbs 21:20)
- 3) Sometimes when you stop, you realize you didn't know where (or why) you were going in the first place. You might already be there, if only you'd stop. In this calmness, it is easier to listen for further instructions. (James 1:19)
- 4) You have to sleep in your bed the way you have made it. If you complain about how someone else has made it, you might be sleeping on the couch. (Galatians 6:7)
- 5) Wear pants every day, even if you've convinced yourself they must be shrinking. (Proverbs 21:3)

Grace to you, and peace,

Kate
